I have this situation: I have a table where the "id" field is the primary key. When you insert a new row, the previous row id, is saved in an array named "ids". The array is always with one or more value. For example: [2] 5 [1] 3 From time to time, I would like to get the data based on id field. If I have the id 2 I want to get all the row that belongs to this id. I have a function that return a cursor with all the data. It's working properly when the "id" field is not in the "ids" array. I am trying to implement my function with this code, but don't know what should I do with the "ids" array: def read_data(id_user): query = """ SELECT * FROM table WHERE id = %d; """ cursor = conn.cursor() cursor.execute(query, id_user) return cursor ids = [] def add_id_to_array(): ids.append(id_user) return id_user def get_data(id_user): query = """ SELECT * FROM table WHERE id in ( %d ) and user_id = %d; """ cursor = conn.cursor() cursor.execute(query, ids, id_user) return cursor conn = psql.connect(user
